

Generally speaking, what is your position on the following statements...

The trade or transfer of weapons between countries should not be permitted as a matter of principle.*

Under certain conditions, arms deliveries are necessary to help a country repel an enemy or maintain security in the country.

A country should trade arms if it benefits its economy, no matter what the other effects of that trade are.

Should arms transfers be much more restricted or much less restricted than they are now?

